

RECREATION

You will be in nature's playground in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The University is next to hiking and biking on the Mickelson Trail. There are also guided horseback trail rides next door into the Buckhorn Range. Nearby streams and lakes offer fishing, boating and swimming opportunities. Summer also means a variety of special events.

Indian Museum of North America

"My summer at The Indian University of North America was filled with memories that will last my entire lifetime. I had such wonderful internship and discovered many wonderful opportunities. The people I met were some of the greatest mentors I will ever know; my summer at Crazy Horse was an unforgettable experience."

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Indian University of North America is a unique partnership between the Crazy Horse Memorial Foundation and the University of South Dakota. The 8½ week summer program at Crazy Horse, which began in the summer of 2010, allows accepted students to enroll in college credit hours consisting of Math, English, Native American Studies, Life Skills and a paid internship at the Crazy Horse Memorial.

The program has four purposes:

1. to provide accepted students freshman-level university courses which will transfer to any regionally accredited college or university, students complete one semester of college during the summer,
2. to prepare accepted students for the rigors of college by offering college preparatory courses for students who need them,
3. to extend accepted students paid working internships at the Memorial's visitor complex, and
4. to further fulfill the mission of the Crazy Horse Memorial Foundation.

"Being a part of The Indian University of North America was a lot of hard work, but I had a wonderful time. It was a great opportunity for me to get prepared to start my college education."

—Tyler Allen, 2012 participant

MISSION OF THE CRAZY HORSE MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

To protect and preserve the culture, tradition, and living heritage of the North American Indians. The Foundation demonstrates its commitment to this endeavor by continuing the progress as the world's largest sculptural undertaking by carving a memorial to Lakota leader Crazy Horse to represent all North American Indians; by providing educational and cultural programming; by acting as a repository for Native American artifacts, arts and crafts through the Indian Museum of North America and the Native American Educational and Cultural Center; and by establishing and operating the Indian University of North America and, when practical, a medical training center for American Indians.

"The Indian University of North America has made a tremendous impact on my life. At the University I was able to get ahead in my college education, learned new study habits, made amazing friends and made unforgettable memories. Looking back, I wouldn't have wanted to spend my summer of 2012 any other way."

—Dana Kubal, 2012 participant

ROOM AND BOARD

The Indian University of North America at Crazy Horse was completed in the spring of 2010. The classrooms, large commons area and student rooms (complete with individual bathrooms) are in The Indian University of North America, which has an inspiring view of the Crazy Horse mountain carving. Meals are served at the Laughing Water Restaurant and there are regular outdoor cookouts for students.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Admission requirements for the Summer Program of The Indian University of North America, are as follows:

- Applicants must be 17–21 years of age when the program commences.
- Applicants must possess a high school diploma (Regular Curriculum) or GED before the program commences with a cumulative grade point average or equivalent of 2.00.
- ACT or SAT scores are required at the time of application. The composite ACT score for regular admission is 21; the SAT score for regular admission is 990. ACT scores below 21 or SAT scores below 990 will be considered for provisional admittance. Students who enter using the SAT will be required to complete the ACT as it serves as the baseline academic measure. This is of no cost to the student.
- Preference is extended to enrolled members of federally recognized tribes, however, the University is open to all qualified students.
- Applicants must possess a need for the curriculum offered.
- Completion of a written exercise on why the applicant is interested in the program.
- Applicants must complete a telephone interview with the selection committee.
- All applicants must complete the admission application and provide accompanying required materials by January 7, 2013 for early admission and by March 1, 2013 for regular admission. Applicants chosen for admission must submit final high school transcripts by June 3, 2013. (SAT or ACT scores must be submitted with the application) If the transcript reveals the student has not graduated from high school, the student cannot participate in the university program.
